Preface

In 1956 the Town Clerk of Fairhaven, Massachusetts, answered my request for information by telling me that all the town records from 1812 (when the town was created) to 1867 had been destroyed in the 1938 hurricane.

I needed the material for supporting evidence. Fortunately, I was in possession of the James Marvel Family Bible (published 1811). In it were recorded all the births, marriages, and deaths of my family that had taken place in Fairhaven. Others searching in that area have not been so lucky.

In 1982 I discovered that the Genealogical Society of Salt Lake City, Utah, had microfilmed Books 1 and 2 of the Fairhaven Town Records in 1973. They had not been lost, as I had been told.

These two books covered a time period from 1812 to 1835, leaving a 32-year period without records.

This volume is an effort to assemble and present the available early records of the town.

In addition to the town records themselves, the indexes of births, marriages, and deaths registered with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts from 1848, when registration became compulsory, until 1850, have been extracted for Fairhaven residents. Early gravestone inscriptions have been collected, including those stones removed from the Old Burying Ground (Railroad Park) and reset at Riverside Cemetery.

Extracts of data concerning residents of Fairhaven named in the 1855 and 1865 Massachusetts censuses and the Federal census of 1820 have been included.

Although this volume is not as complete as I would like it to have been, it would not have been possible at all without the cooperation of my husband Bill and my cousins Philip Morgan and Virginia Morgan Mikati, and the encouragement and help of Helen and Leonard Smith.

Woodside Cemetery

Corner of Main and Morgan Streets, North Fairhaven, Mass.
(Incriptions copied November 1982)

Land for this cemetery was purchased from Enoch S. Jenney. The two acres were cared for by the Fairhaven Improvement Association in 1937 but have since come under town care.

Many bodies originally buried here have been removed to the newer Riverside Cemetery less than a mile to the south.

The town has also used this cemetery for pauper graves.

All stones but one face west. Most of them are in very good condition.
